LONDON LIFE REAL ESTATE FUND Q2 BULLETIN 2024

Through the first two quarters of 2024, the London Life Real Estate Fund has observed the income and capital components of performance generally offset one another, producing a relatively flat overall return profile. Conditions for future capital performance however are trending positively as the Bank of Canada made its first cut to the overnight rate in June with market expectations that further easing will follow. The central bank will continue to monitor economic conditions, and should the path of inflation migrate toward target, a neutral rate of +/- 2.5% may be achieved in 2025. Bond yields for the most common financing terms (5/10 years) have begun to respond accordingly, bringing down the cost of debt. The cost of capital is a material input in the value proposition for real estate investment and as the rate environment improves, we would expect market activity to accelerate. Further, as the spread premium widens for real estate (discount rates over risk-free rates) the return of idle capital should drive competitive bidding processes and pricing expectations. The Fund's robust valuation policy, which includes one third of the portfolio being valued by an external appraiser each month, is important in ensuring that Net Asset Values are reflective of current market conditions.

Investment Activity:

Fund composition has and will continue to evolve alongside our top down, research driven allocation targets with the primary goal of maximizing performance. Divesting of older generation, capital-intensive assets and recycling the proceeds into new income producing and development opportunities, which have the potential for outsized risk adjusted returns, is important in "future proofing" the portfolio. In the second quarter the Fund sold its interest in 2220 Marine Drive in Oakville, ON for $32M. The 149-unit apartment building was developed in the early 1970s and acquired in 2001 for $8.75M.

Asset Revitalization:

In contrast to the divestment activity and rationale noted above, there are many cases where core, high conviction assets remain part of the longterm strategy but require capital re-investment to produce the best possible outcomes. Demand drivers from tenants are constantly shifting and to remain relevant it is critical to be responsive and adaptive to change. This has never been more apparent than with the ongoing evolution of the office sector where the fallout from the pandemic has created a paradigm shift in both work habits and space utilization. Important to recall that this is not the first time a significant disruption has occurred, and nor will it be the last. In response the Fund has embarked on several key initiatives to address its competitive positioning. Management recently completed and unveiled its updates to 1 Adelaide St. E. in Toronto, ON (pictured above) which incorporates a new entrance lobby and lounge areas paired with fresh tenant amenities inclusive of an outdoor courtyard and best in class 'end of trip' facilities.
